Hearing Wednesday on comprehensive permit for apartment complex

by Arlene Surprenant

The Investors Management Group (IMG) will go before the Wilmington Board of Appeals next Wednesday, September 10 to seek a comprehensive permit to build 204 mixed rental apartments on property off Ballardvale Street.

The comprehensive permit, if granted, in effect, gives town board permission to go ahead with the project. The only board separate from the application process is the Conservation Commission, which requires its own approval. If IMG is not successful in gaining the permit, IMG representatives have stated they will seek one through the state's board of appeals.

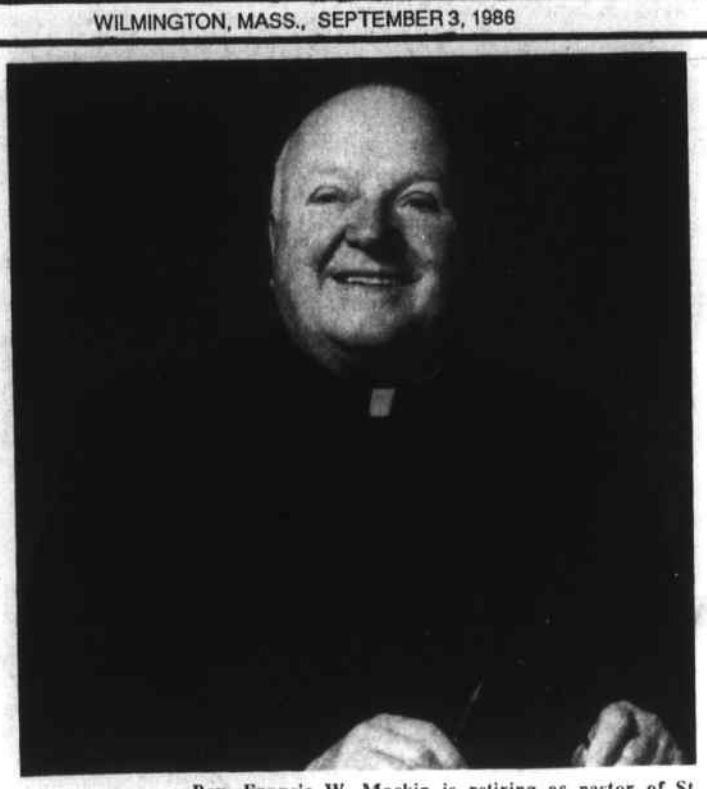

IMG may run into some difficulties in obtaining the permit. At a recent MEPA meeting to determine whether there was a need for an Environmental Impact Report (EIR), various town officials raised questions which still remain unanswered. A large group of neighbors were also present at that meeting to raise their objections. The neighbors hired an environmental attorney to help in their quest to see that IMG complies with all environmental regulations and, if possible, call a halt to plans to construct so many units practically in their backyards.

The state has determined there is a need for an EIR. IMG now has a set period of time to address environmental issues and traffic impact on the site.

Birthday adoption

Tuesday was a very special day for a boy on Sprucewood Road in North Wilmington. On his seventh birthday, Joshua Steven Randlett was officially adopted by Norman and Hazel Barnes. His name is now Steven Joshua Barnes. He has lived with the Barnes for four years.

Father Mackin to retire

Rev. Francis W. Mackin is retiring as pastor of St. Margaret's Parish of Beverly Farms. His last public Mass as pastor will be on Sunday, Sept. 14 at 11 a.m., followed by a special musical program and reception. Father Mackin served at St. Thomas Parish in Wilmington for 21 years, until his transfer to Beverly in 1979. He will remain at St. Margaret's as a senior priest.

Five firms file for tax abatements

Five Wilmington firms have filed applications with the state Appellate Tax Board seeking to reduce the assessed value of their real estate. What is unusual about the applications is that a Pennsylvania firm is involved in each case. The firm of Ducharme and McMillan is listed on each application.

The five firms are Avco, Keene Lighting, Surface Coatings, General Electric and Polyvinyl Chemicals. Each of the firms had filed for an abatement with the town, and the abatements were rejected. One other firm, E.I. DuPont had filed for an abatement with the town. That abatement was also rejected, but the town has not been notified of a filing with the state Appellant Tax Board.

The amount which could be granted is not known, as the applications are not filed for specific amounts. Instead they ask for a review of the assessment. But if Avco were to be granted a $2 million abatement, it could mean a $200,000 loss for the town. Avco's present valuation is $48 million.

Principal assessor Anthony Krzeminski said that it would probably be worth it for the town to hire a specialist to fight the abatements. Yet he was confident of the town's ability to win, since the vaulations were all certified by the state.

Town officials have said that it is not uncommon for several firms to use such an agent in a town where there has been a revaluation. Wilmington just completed a revaluation within the past year.

Many changes as schools reopen

by Arlene Surprenant

As school buses get set to roll next Monday, students at Wilmington High School as well as in the three elementary schools, especially, face some dramatic changes this year.

High on the list of changes is a newly enlarged high school, thanks to ongoing renovation work on the older building.

"I think the kids are going to come back in awe, and yes, I think they're going to get lost," Assistant Supt. Henry Dembowski told the Town Crier last week.

"School will be opening to a much nicer plant and construction work will not be near as noisy (as last semester)," he added.

To help students find their way around, principal Paul Fleming has provided them with detailed maps sent out in a recent mailing. The maps show the location of classrooms, offices, and such rooms as the new gymnasium, cafeteria, music suite, and library.

According to Fleming, students will find a brightened interior, thanks to new hallway lights and coats of fresh paint. In late October and November, the new music suite, home economics, physical education, and industrial arts facilities will be ready for occupancy. Until then, industrial arts classes will continue to be held in the Swain School and gym classes will be held primarily outdoors.

Fleming said 300 new desks are expected to be placed in first floor rooms while others on the second floor have been refurbished. Because of the cost and effort put into the renovations, he warns, that administrators will deal severely with any vandals who deface school property.

Because of a lack of shelves and furniture, there will be a delayed opening of the new library. And because cafeteria furniture has not yet come in, students will use the present furniture and eat in one of three lunch sections incorporated into the period six time slot.

According to Dembowski, class rooms on the second floor and all teaching stations are going to be functioning on opening day.

"I think the public should realize that some of these areas were never planned to be complete by opening day," he said, adding that by December 1, all areas should be functioning even though the building will not be in "A-1" shape.

Another change is the addition of at least 13 new teachers and a major shift in administrators in the various buildings.

"I think we're opening with some veteran administrators who have a lot of good years of service behind them and a good quality teaching staff," said an enthusiastic Dembowski, adding that "I think everything's in great hands."

Taking over at the West Intermediate School will be James Jordan, former acting principal at the North Intermediate. Former Wildwood principal Mary Driscoll will replace him while Robert Barrett, of the Shawsheen School, will assume new duties at the Wildwood School until his retirement in June.

Perhaps the biggest change will occur at the Shawsheen Elementary School. Robert Coffill has been hired as the school's head administrator while Robert Arsenault has been moved from the Woburn Street School to be his second in command. Dolores Silva will remain principal of the Woburn Street School.

Incoming freshmen can look forward to a special orientation meeting at the high school this Friday, Sept. 5. And for the first time, handbooks outlining school rules and regulations, as well as programs and curriculum, will be distributed to all district students on the first day of school.

According to Dembowski, this is a real first. Previously, there were no handbooks available for elementary age children and their parents. But with the help of the elementary principals and Reading Director Brenda Squire, new handbooks were pulled together over the summer. Now, each of the three elementary schools will fall under the same regulations.

Also, Dembowski added, a special four color separation drawing complete with logo, a Wilmington Wildcat, and the Whitefield Elm now graces the cover of the high school handbook. Dembowski plans to improve the intermediate handbooks in the near future.

Project Charlie is a drug prevention program designed to enhance self-esteem and teach students how to avoid being "peer pressured into drugs and alcohol," according to Dembowski. Administrators expect this special program will be a welcome addition to the elementary curriculum, especially with the current emphasis on the "say no to drugs" message.

At least 40 teachers will be trained in the program under the guidance of principals Dolores Silva and Mary Driscoll. Both recently returned from a week's training session in Minnesota and will share their knowledge with the teachers at a substantial cost savings to the school department, said Dembowski.

Finally, the ongoing accreditation of all three elementary schools is continuing at "full speed," said Dembowski. In the fall, the schools will be going through the self-evaluation phase. When complete, the process will let officials know the weaknesses and strengths at the elementary level. It will also provide ways Wilmington can improve its three lower level schools.

In the immediate future, a reorganization committee will be formed on a townwide basis to explore various avenues of better balancing school building populations on the elementary and intermediate levels.

"I'm looking ahead to a big year," stated Supt. Robert Horan last week. "We had our year of working through things," he explained and now he sees that this year the school system seems to be "in pretty good shape."

Meet the King & Queen

Barbara Burinski as Queen Katherine and Ray Nelson as King Richardare are the royal couple reigning over the 8th annual King Richard's Faire. Located in South Carver Massachuseetts, the Faire opens Sept. 6 &7 and runs for eight consecutive weekends through October 26, including Columbus Day, Monday October 13.

King Richard's Renaissance Faire

All-new dramatic diversions, preposterous plots and murderous mysteries will put guests in the thick of the action when King Richard's Faire opens for its 8th season, September 6 & 7. Producers have woven an intricate web of intrigue around this summer's Renaissance Faire: Village-wide theatrical story lines complete with so much crowd involvement that even the most modern of patrons will surely get caught up in the adventure of the 16th century.

Every weekend through October 26 on a permanent site located on Route 58 in South Carver, Massachusetts, Fairgoers will be called upon to help King Richard's guards solve a heinous (and hilarious) murder mystery -- " No Body Leave This Realm".

Imagine 70 acres of farmland set in Massachuesett's gently rolling coastal plain. The landscape is ablaze with the colors of autumn--- russet and gold and copper. The scent of scrub pine and bayberry floats through the air. In the midst of this bucolic splender rises a stone castle, thatched huts, tents, barns, and brilliantly hued banners. The sound of tambourines, trumpets, beggars, lutes, wrestlers, horses, growling bears, singing gypsies and clashing armour pierces the country silence. And every where you turn, scenes of real life--as it was in the 1600s--are enacted to you. You see the mud eaters eat dirt for pay , you watch magicians and jugglers defy nature and gravity. You see artisans create crafts of the period.

To provide the realism that enables visitors to "willingly suspend their disbelief" at King Richard's Faire, the cast of more than 500 actors and crafsmen is thoroughly trained in 16th century dialect, manners, and dress. They not only act their parts-- thay live them.

The only bad thing about King Richard's realm -is that, like Camelot, it doesn't last forever. The pagentry, debauchery, drama, fun and games of the eighth annual Faire can be enjoyed only on weekends from Saturday, September 6 until Sunday, October 26. Also open Columbus Day, October 13. For more information and directions call(617) 492-6944.

Special needs group meets Monday evening

The Wilmington Special Needs Advisory Council (SNAC) is ready to start its meetings for the 1986-87 school year. Meetings are held on the first Monday of every month, exclusive of holidays, at 7:30 p.m. at the July 4th Building at the corner of Middlesex Avenue and Church Street across from the town common. As the first Monday of September is the Labor Day holiday, the first meeting will be held Monday, September 8.

The SNAC is a non-profit volunteer group of individuals dedicated to insuring that the special needs children of Wilmington receive all the programs and benefits to which they are entitled under federal, state and local programs.

The SNAC, a support group for the parents of special needs children, in addition to acting as a sounding board for parents with problems and concerns, offers throughout the year various seminars dealing with general as well as specific problems of the parent.

Two fund raising events are usually held during the year. A winter dance has been very successful in the past and a pancake breakfast in the spring serves up a mouthwatering meal for a reasonable cost. The SNAC uses the funds it raises in a variety of ways. The SNAC awards scholarships to special needs students who are continuing their education beyond high school. Since Proposition 2 1/2, the SNAC has assisted the Wilmington Recreation Department with funds and supplies when available budgets have fallen short, to help put on events for Wilmington's special needs children. In the past, this has included a Halloween party, a Christmas party, and an Easter egg hunt. The SNAC has also made contributions to the Camp 40 Acres Program.

The Wilmington S.N.A.C. meets regularly with the Wilmington Public School Special Education director, various members of the Wilmington School Committee, the Shawsheen Vo-Tech School Committee, and the Wilmington Recreation Department. SNAC members took part last year in the interview process for selecting the school superintendent, the assistant superintendent, and the Shawsheen elementary principal.

Turn-of-the-century photographic exhibit at Arlington Trust

A collection of old Wilmington photographs is on display at the Wilmington Plaza branch of the Arlington Trust Co.

The photos are recent prints from a collection of negatives taken shortly after the turn of the century by Ed Nelson Eames. Eames, who served as a selectman, was a lumber dealer in Wilmington.

Before his death, Eames gave his collection of negatives to Harold Melzar, who in turn gave them to Capt. Larz Neilson, publisher of the Town Crier. Several of the pictures have appeared in the Town Crier, accompanying historical articles.

The photographs on display at the bank are of the Jaquith Hemlock, the Congregational parsonage, the East School, Perry's Blacksmith Shop, blacksmith John W. Perry, and a Wilmington baseball team on the common.

The display at the bank is coordinated by the Wilmington Council for the Arts. The photographs will be on display through the month of September.

Neighbors Club plans fall meet

The Tewksbury Neighbors and Newcomers Club will begin its fall schedule Tuesday, September 9, at St. William's Church in the lower hall. The speaker will be a representative of Home Interiors. Beautiful items will be shown and offered for sale. The program starts at 7:30 p.m. and all Tewksbury residents are invited.

The Tewksbury Neighbors and Newcomers Club is an organization whose basic goal is to introduce local people for the purpose of friendship, as well as encouraging civic and charitable participation. Although the meetings are basically oriented to women, most of the social events are directed at couple and family participation.

Meetings are held monthly at which time guest speakers are presented and/or demonstrations concerning various topics of interest are offered. The club also includes interest groups such as play groups, couples bowling, bridge, which are small groups of members doing what they enjoy together. We also have a variety of social programs including a Children's Christmas party, hayrides, dances, and dinners.

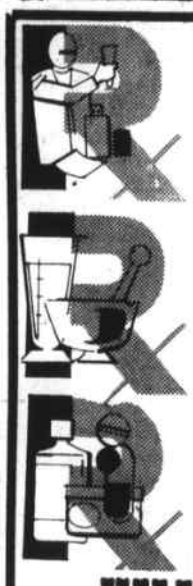

Some of the charitable interests supported by the group's fund-raising efforts are scholarships to local students, the Alternative House in Lowell, the Ann Sullivan Center, the Tewksbury State Hospital, and passes toward museum admittance as well as new books to the Tewksbury Patten Public Library.

JIM MICELI IS EVERYTHING

A People's Representative Should Be.

Ann MacInnis and Josephine Kelley seated, Peg McNeill standing
Senior Citizen Center
Dedicated April 1986

Every candidate for public office promises our elderly citizens he's going to help solve their problems. Jim Miceli's different. He produces results.

In an editorial titled "Elderly get boost" the Medford Daily Mercury said this about Jim Miceli's Elderly Housing Bill, which was passed by the Legislature and signed into law by Gov. Dukakis this year:

"There are times when the State Legislature enact laws that are an answer to a public need. 'Initially sponsored by Rep. James Miceli (D-Wilmington), the legislation had the full support of all our area state legislators.'

The Legislature's action has not only met a pressing human need but it also makes good financial sense."

When the Wilmington Council on Aging needed help to renovate the old Buzzell School as its new Senior Citizen Center, they went to Jim Miceli. Again he delivered.
At the official opening of the new center this past spring, the Council dedicated it in Jim Miceli's honor with a plaque which hangs in the center. The plaque reads in part, "For his outstanding support and services to the Wilmington Senior Citizens in renovating the Buzzell Senior Citizen Center, 1986"

Family vacation retraces couple's honeymoon trip

by Arlene Surprenant

This summer, a Wilmington couple spent 18 days retracing the steps of their honeymoon through America's Great Northwest.

This trip, however, proved different. For one thing, Rick and Carol Marquis of Shawsheen Avenue, tended to view everything through the eyes of their children, four-year-old Lauren and six ("going on seven") year-old Richard. They learned to appreciate nature's smallest wonders, from a curious marmot to a swaying sunflower, as well as life's simplest pleasures, like a quick dip in a sparkling clear mountain lake.

For another, they worked as a team with their children, cooking, cleaning, and putting up their pop-up trailer at night. Tucked momentarily away were the more magical, romantic feelings of 10 years ago and, in their place, were feelings of family responsibility and "a real partnership," as Carol was quick to point out during an interview one recent afternoon.

"This was not so much a vacation for relaxation as it was a vacation for enrichment and getting to know each other in a little different perspective," Carol explains with a smile. She and her husband Rick, director of Boston Operations for H.P. Hood in Charlestown, made the decision after their 1976 honeymoon to make the same journey 10 years later "with whatever family we had." So, after a false start at the end of June and numerous attempts to minimize luggage, they began their long anticipated trek on July 24.

Their mostly sunny days invariably began at 7 or 8 a.m. and wound down about 10 p.m. when they would seek a good night's rest. Their travels took them through such states as Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Nebraska, Wyoming, Montana, and North Dakota as well as Baniff, Calgary, and Jasper in the Canadian Rockies. They climbed mountains and walked on a glacier. They camped in the nation's parks, walked among replicas of dinosaurs, and caught all manner of wildlife and national monuments on film. After stopping for the night, they often sought out the nearest playground, fishing hole, or amusement area to give young children a chance to work off excess energy.

Carol enumerates on some of the trip's highlights as son Richard - "the real tourist among us" - chimes in with some comments of his own.

One of their most enjoyable evenings was spent on an Old West cook-out sponsored by the park service in Yellowstone National Park. For $60 per family, they were able to ride in a stagecoach or covered wagon to the site of a barbecue feast featuring steaks, chili, corn muffins, country music for entertainment, and good old apple pie.

"It was a fabulous cookout," Carol remembers, even though "we had two horses called Chip and Dale who didn't want to move."

During their three day stay in the park, they ran into buffalo, elk, moose, badgers, and antelope and joined other tourists in snapping numerous pictures. Carol explains this practice led to "enormous traffic jams" wherever they went.

"I liked seeing the buffalo," adds Richard, as he proudly shows off photos of the animals he took with his own camera.

One thing the family didn't quite expect were the strict rules regarding bears. Tourists are warned not to cook in their tents or sleep in clothes that they cooked in. Food must be locked in car trunks or hung high on trees and cowbells around the neck are meant to discourage bears from getting too close.

"As a last resort, you're supposed to lay down and play dead as you really can't outrun them," Carol says, adding that it was hard to practice this with her children.

"Montana is just incredibly beautiful--all mountains and hills," Carol continues, explaining this was one of her favorite places. She tells of the awe-inspiring Going-to-the Sun Highway on the way to Glacier National Park.

"This is a very narrow road along the edge of the mountains. As you drive, you feel like you can just reach out and touch the mountains on the other side," she explains, adding that they did encounter a little difficulty towing their trailer.

Another highlight was a trip to Calgary, site of the famous Calgary Stampede and one of "the most modern Canadian cities," according to Carol. While there, the family spent some time at the Calgary Zoo with its unusual prehistoric park. The children, especially, seemed fascinated by giant replicas of extinct dinosaurs and the fossilized teeth and jawbones they were allowed to handle.

Richard and Lauren also learned about glaciers in Jasper when they took a 25 minute ride onto the Athabasca Glacier in a bus-like vehicle with huge tires that reportedly cost $370,000.

"The kids were well prepared with winter hats and mittens and they needed them," says Carol, adding that the whole set-up was "big business" with snack and souvenir shops and glacial water to drink.

The highlight of their honeymoon trip--a stay at rustic Storm Mountain Lodge in Banff--was also a highlight of this trip as well. The Marquis stayed in a cabin formerly belonging to railroad workers. The only change they noted in the decor in the past 10 years was a lamp which had replaced the single lightbulb suspended from the ceiling.

At night, they sampled gourmet food (though they politely refused all suggestions they try the buffalo meat) in the lodge's restaurant and listened to chamber music amid the elegant surroundings. As Carol pointed out with a laugh, "this was our only real elegance of the whole trip.

For Carol, the trip was a challenge to her organizational abilities as well as a learning experience. Food, for instance, was mostly bought that day and stored in a cooler in preparation for their nightly barbecue and frequent snack breaks. Clothes were packed in four suitcases and two towel bags with pajamas and necessities for evening showers. On hand, too, was a suitcase packed with books, word games, toys "which didn't have a million pieces," and a tape recorder and tapes like Cabbage Patch Dreams which was held in reserve for the tiring trip home.

Carol observed that her children were "happy with very little and they made each day an adventure." She learned first grader Richard "could read better than I thought he could" after listening to him read to his sister in the back seat. She learned washing Lauren' hair in the campground shower wasn't the same "ordeal" it is at home. She learned, too, that her children could be "an absolute delight" and, though far from peaceful, the trip with them along was never boring.

"We would do it again, absolutely," says Carol in answer to your query. What advice would she give to others contemplating a similar trip?

"Do it, because none of you would ever forget it. Don't hesitate because of the children, because kids are very flexible and only want to have fun and be with you."

Carol pauses here for a moment as she weighs her next words.

"I hope Richard and Lauren realize how lucky they are to live in this country. I hope they got a feeling for what America is, because I did." Again she pauses, then explains what she really means is she hopes they realize that the United States is more than just Wilmington, Massachusetts.

All told, the Marquis family traveled 7,300 miles in 18 days. They spent over $1,800 to make the long journey across our land. But the rich memories they've brought back, the greater awareness they have of their country and each other has certainly made this year's summer vacation well worthwhile.

This is summer?

Winter clothes are strange garb for a summer vacation, except when you visit the Athabasca Glacier. Richard and Lauren Marquis are shown on the glacier with their father, Rick.

Frankly speaking

If your finding the local political scene somewhat dull and dreary, all you have to do is take a quick stroll over to Waltham, Somerville, or Watertown where a politician's dream is unfolding; namely a political season full of intrigue, accusations, wild candidates' nights, and lots of old fashioned mud slinging.

In the Eighth Congressional District, every one and their mother is seeking to succeed retiring Congressman Thomas 'Tip' O'neil. At the head of the pack are State Senator George Bachrach and Joe Kennedy. Recent polls have indicated that Bachrach is catching up to Kennedy, long favored as the man to win the democratic primary. But the sense you get down in blue collar neighborhoods of Waltham and Somerville is that Kennedy is their man for Washington, and that Bachrach has been spending too much time in Harvard Square. If you take a close look at both men you get the definite impression that George just wouldn't fit in too well at the corner bar in Somerville, or the Walex Bowling Alley in Waltham. Kennedy, for all his charisma and charm, is still more easy to relate to for the average voter, and will certainly take the primary. However, before that, were all bound to see a few sparks fly over in the eighth. Running for a congressional seat tends to bring out both the best in people and their tempers. The League of Women voters is now recommending helmets for all those attending the next candidates night.

The movement of Bachrach to the congressional race has left a state senate seat open, which is being sought by a multitude of candidates in the Cambridge area, among them Mark White, son of Kevin White, and Michael Barrett, a former state rep. from Reading, who campaigned hard in Wilmington while running against Congressman Markey in 1984. That race might bring out the vote as much as the congressional race in that area. Mark White, just as Joe Kennedy, has an established political name to run on, and Michael Barrett is attracting the liberal vote in Cambride, and there is plenty of that down there. Philosophically, Barrett seems to fit in better down by the red-line than the last time he was in this area giving an anti-Reagan speech.

In Somerville, which is also in the Kennedy - Bachrach fight, there is a battle ensuing between incumbent state senator Sal Albano and former State Representative Vinny Piro. Previously Albano had defeated Piro for the senate seat when Piro had been indicted for bribery charges. This was a big step for Sal, who is well known in Wilmington, having taught as a special needs teacher in the public school system.

Simply put, Albano and Piro can be compared to any two people you know who basically hate one another. If either one were ever kidnapped, the other would be an immediate suspect. And, now they both have the chance to show their true feelings publicly.

If there is one theme that Albano is stressing its honesty, which is probably what anyone would stress when running against Vinny 'grease some palms' Piro. Albano's slogan is 'getting the job done . . . honestly.' For Piro, his bumper stickers read 'Vinny is back.' That almost sounds like the title for a new Stephen King novel, which would probably end up as a best seller. In any event, the people of Somerville seem to be enjoying the excitement, as they are accustomed to a rather busy political environment.

So, before it all ends on the night of September 16, there is bound to be some real exciting moments left for the voters; but it won't be found at this end of Route 93. We'll just have to tune in to Chet and Natalie at eleven.

The Humble Farmer

Humble explains 'secret' columns

Humorist Robert Skoglund, who often writes under the name of The Humble Farmer, explained from his St. George home his reasons for not telling anyone about 346 humor columns he wrote between 1975 and 1986.

Skoglund said he had not shown the columns to anyone earlier--and that included his neighbor an mentor, the venerable Gramp Wiley--for fear that a friend might recognize himself in one of the columns.

"When you write a really good column your neighbors and friends all want to see themselves in it. Of course everything I write is something I make up myself. You'd really have to strain to see yourself in one of my stories, but some people think they do.

"That's why even Gramp Wiley didn't see the columns. The first thing he'd do is claim he told me the story the week before. Like, for example, where I point out that whenever Louise Nevelson--she's that sculptor who makes works of art out of recycled materials, such as toilet seats--moves into a town, the life expectancy of the land fill is automatically doubled. And when I wrote that 'college gives you the ability to be wrong and still present a rational explanation of why you're right'--well, Julian would have wanted to hog the credit for that one."

For all of the secret columns written over the entire 11-year period Skoglund said he used only his own ideas, "though I might have had supper with Julian or Crandall or talked with Richard on the telephone briefly before sitting down at my Radio Shack TRS-80."

Julian, Richard and Crandall, close friends of the writer, all expressed shock and surprise when they heard that some of the secret columns were genuinely funny--and that he wrote them himself.

A man who refused to identify himself said, "Skog has done to columns what the Arabs did to oil. He did half of it until the price went up."

Skoglund said any of his neighbors would be proud to be tastefully mentioned as the perpetuators of the sex, crime and blunders described in his column, "but I make everything up," he explained," he explained. "Characters, situations, everything. In over 11 years I've never written a word of truth.

"You can't believe how many people call me or grab me by the arm on the street after I've written a column about typical everyday things that could happen to most anybody. 'I guess I know who you were writing about,' they'll say. Then they'll either smirk and say I was terrible to write about their friend or laugh something wicked--depending on which side they were on. By keeping these columns secret for years, no one can possibly claim to be identified."

When questioned by Ray Gross of the Courier Gazette on what he believed the unknown series of columns was about, Gramp Wiley was reported to have said something unprintable.

"That's not as bad as it sounds," Skoglund said. "Lots of things that you could have heard in church 25 years ago are unprintable now--look what affirmative action did to the want ads."

For years Skoglund has been writing columns using his old neighbor, Gramp Wiley, as a mouthpiece for wry and dry philosophy. Another character, Addler (an insecure psychologist), is employed for problems of a more serious nature. In one of the newly discovered columns, Addler brags of buying a large sailboat--with the serial numbers filed off--for only $500. 'It works out well,' he says, 'no one wants to borrow it.'

When bureaucrats with problems find themselves on Addler's couch, instead of telling them how to fix things up he advises them to hire three more people who can't do it.

For columns dealing with the pressures of scrounging enough food to sustain life, and keeping the banks from repossessing property, Skoglund created the whining, snivling character, Greensleeves. Critics have suggested that the middle-aged Greensleeves actually walks and breathes. To which Skoglund replies, "Let them think what they want. Remember the column about the beautiful woman who left her kind and handsome husband for the guy with no teeth? I said if I'd known what she wanted I'd had mine yanked out years ago. I heard about that.

"I write fiction, but if my characters are so clearly delineated that people imagine that they bear a resemblance to their friends--good. It doesn't bother me. What does bother me is when Gramp Wiley claims he told me the story the night before. That's why I kept these stories from the public for so long."

Some of Skoglund's secret columns will be printed this fall in the Courier Gazette. A new character to appear is old Doc Tibbets who pulled teeth out on the islands 50 or more years ago, back before the days of Novocain. Doc would get the patients in the chair and call for a bottle of whiskey. Then he'd drink the whiskey and pull the tooth.

The band members did indulge in some honest training, but there was also some zaniness. Take the Gnurd Olympics, for instance. With one cabin pitted against the others, students competed for the Golden Chicken. Here, Laura Valatka, Cindy King and Laura Duden balance water in a relay race. Julie Cassidy is at right. There was also a relay race in which the participants had to get into and out of an old uniform.

ON YOUR FEET
BUNIONS

Bunions are a common deformity of the Big Toe and the joint at the base of the big toe. The deformity is primarily caused by inherited bone structure and can be aggravated by shoe gear.
The problems associated with bunion deformities are usually a painful "bump" or enlargement on the inside of the foot at the base of the big toe and a deviated or crooked Big Toe that pushes against or under the second toe.
Correction of the deformity ranges from removal of the bump and realignment of the big toe, to more sophisticated procedures utilizing stainless steel screws. Following a thorough examination, we will discuss our findings and treatment modalities.
All these procedures are performed in the office operating room under safe local anesthesia. Advances in operating techniques provide selection of the best procedure(s) and minimal post-operative discomfort.

TAXES ON BUSINESS

Tax reform makes it even more important for business owners to obtain on-going accounting services. At the same time that tax reformers pushed for cuts in individual tax rates, they were taking a hard look at the tax laws pertaining to businesses.

Some tax reformers wanted to target industries whose tax preferences enabled them to "zero out" in the past, and escape taxation entirely. Other tax reformers wanted to be sure that business taxes would drop, in order to promote strength in the economy.

Business tax reform efforts focussed on familiar areas: entertainment expenses and business meals, as well as business travel. The House bill allowed depreciation to be partly indexed, with incentives for investment, while the Senate version called for continuation of the Accelerated Cost Recovery System, which allows faster "write-offs".

As the real meaning of tax reform evolves, business owners will be wise to pay special attention to their earnings projections -- so that steps can be taken early enough to permit adjustments.

Lets's discuss your business accounting needs at:

In Business

'Call waiting' is coming soon

Wilmington telephone customers may soon not have to worry about missing important phone calls because their telephone is in use for hours on end - and customers who are attending family gatherings can get calls from friends even when nobody's home.

Call waiting and call forwarding are among four special features that will soon be available to New England Telephone customers in Wilmington for the first time, thanks to improvements being made to the company's local switching system.

David Ravanesi, New England Telephone public relations manager, said company technicians are installing a new computerized telecommunications system at the call switching office on Main Street in Wilmington.

This new system, Ravanesi said, will provide customers in Wilmington several new calling options, including call waiting, call forwarding and the capacity to program one and two digit dialing combinations for emergency calls.

These and other services were previously unavailable to customers in the 657 and 658 exchange area.

"The new system incorporates some of the most sophisticated electronics in our industry," Ravanesi said. "It will process calls faster and use less electricity than other call switching systems.

"Also," he continued, "a memory within the system contains telephone numbers and call-routing information that will enable customers to select calling services to fit their individual needs."

Ravanesi said the system will be activated in mid-December and will make available several new calling options at minimal monthly charges. These options are:

- Call waiting, a service that allows a person already involved in a phone conversation to be alerted by a "beep" on the line, that another call is coming in;
- Speed calling, which enables callers to use their telephones to code phone numbers into the system's memory and then touch or dial just one or two numbers to speed calls through to emergency and frequently dialed numbers.
- Call forwarding, which allows automatic forwarding of incoming calls to another telephone number; and
- Three-way calling, which allows a third party to be added to an existing conversation.

Ravanesi said the computer based telecommunications switching system processes voice and data transmission over internal digital lines and contains thumbnail sized computer chips, called microprocessors, that can handle more than one million instructions per second.

He added that the system also continually tests, diagnoses and gathers data on itself--automatically giving company technicians reports at least once a day.

This project is one of many New England Telephone is undertaking this year in Massachusetts as part of its $429 million program to continue expanding and modernizing its network to meet the telecommunications needs of its 2.8 million customers in the Bay State.

By the end of 1986, nearly 70 percent of New England Telephone customers in Massachusetts will be served by computerized call switching systems.

DeltaLab promotes Sullivan

James D. Sullivan has been promoted to Director of DeltaLab, the Pro Audio Division of Analog & Digital Systems, Inc. (ADS). He moves to the position from that of DeltaLab Sales Manager, replacing Richard E. DeFreitas, who will now devote his full-time efforts to engineering.

"In the time since ADS took over the DeltaLab product line, just over a year now, Jim has proven a tremendous asset," says Dr. Godehard A. Guenther, ADS founder and president, commenting on the appointment. "Without his leadership capability and understanding of the pro audio market, that transition period would have been far more complex for us. In his new position, Jim will have even more of an opportunity to shape DeltaLab's future and facilitate growth for the Division," Dr. Guenther concludes.

Sullivan, who joined DeltaLab three years ago as assistant sales manager, lives in Salem, N.H. with his wife and two children.

ADS, well known as a leading manufacturer of high fidelity components for both home and car, acquired rights to produce the DeltaLab product line in March, 1985. Located in the Massachusetts high tech corridor along Rt. 128, the company employs 140 area residents.

The outdoors column

by Bill Conlon

Hunting season begins this week in Massachusetts, so it's worth exploring some of the philosphy behind this oldest of all sports.

For I am a hunter, just like my father and his father and all of my fathers throughout the ages.

It is an ancient and honorable pursuit, though it's come under attack these last few years. Don't expect me to apologize to anyone because of it, for I hunt with pride. My children will also be taught to hunt, without feeling guilty, and the ages-old skills will be handed down to another generation.

But I am not a bloodthirsty barbarian, though some may call me that. Hunting is one of the last of the blood sports, but it is not the same as it was in the days of the mastodon and the cave bear. Today it is an industry -- a managed resource -- and I play a part in it.

In some of the western states, the annual deer hunt is called a "deer harvest," and that is exactly what it is. Deer are watched and studied and counted, and only a safe portion of the herd is taken each year.

An experiment in Utah once proved that deer need to have their numbers limited for their own good. On an isolated plateau in the Beehive State, all predators were wiped out and deer hunting was banned. There was nothing to limit the number of deer.

In a few short months, the deer herd began to rise in number, dramatically. The herd went from some 30,000 to well over 150,000 before the plants on the plateau became exhausted. Then they began to starve in equally staggering numbers. The herd dropped back to around 20,000 in no time at all.

Entire species of plant on the plateau were wiped out. To this day the land has not fully recovered, and the plateau can support only a fraction of the deer that it could before the experiment began.

Since mankind has upset the balance of nature, the deer are being carefully managed.

The same goes for all of the "game" animals. Squirrels and quail, raccoons and rabbits -- all are counted and managed like cornstalks on a farm. The hunter has limits and seasons placed upon his sport, to keep everything in balance.

If the duck population, let's say, is found to be too small, then the season is shortened or the bag limits made smaller or the season halted altogether. And the hunters don't seem to mind. They understand why the limits are needed.

Game animals face no danger of extinction from the hunter's bullet. Indeed, a good hunter would never hunt anything in danger of being wiped out. The license fees spent for hunting go toward improving wildlife habitat and paying the wages of the game managers.

Oddly enough, the animals come out ahead.

But the hunter's bullet is not the greatest danger faced by the animals. Their numbers are not drastically reduced by hunters in the woods -- only trimmed.

The true killer of wildlife is the bulldozer. When land is swept clean for the building of houses and condos, the deer and the rabbits and the foxes never come back. Now who is the barbarian and despoiler?

And a good hunter doesn't pursue his game without emotion. A few bad eggs go armed into the woods every year with killing on their minds, and that's a pity. Luckily these sad souls are few, but they give a bad name to hunters everywhere.

No, most hunters are not like that at all. They love the animals they pursue, and the good hunter feels a twinge of remorse when a majestic buck hits the forest floor. Many is the time, in fact, when the quarry will walk away with gunsights centered on their shoulders. Sometimes it's just wrong to squeeze the trigger.

For me, hunting is a chance to go visit the animals. I'll lean up against a rock and just listen. In a few minutes, after my presence is no longer alarming, the animals will come out from hiding. I love having mice scamper across my boots, or chickadees land on the brim of my hat. (Yes they have!)

And if a sleek buck strolls by me during the legal season, well then, there is an age-old duty to perform. It is to him alone that I'll make any apologies.

--Tackle Box--

The Tewksbury Rod & Gun club will be buzzing this month. A flea market and pig roast is scheduled for September 14, from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. Call 851-9208 on Tuesday nights for more info.

Remember, the Tewksbury R&G's Hunter Safety Course begins this Thursday night at the club's Chandler Street headquarters starting at 7 p.m. Most states now require proof of attendance at an approved Hunter Safety Course (which this one is) before issuing a hunting license, and the class is a must for those ages 14 and up who wish to hunt. Sign-ups at the door.

The U.S. Coast Guard will be holding two Safe Boating courses beginning this month. The classes will be held at Wilmington High School beginning Sept. 8 and at the Lowell Voke school starting Sept. 16.

Both classes will run from 7 to 9 p.m. and will run for ten weeks. A paltry fee will be charged to cover classroom materials and tuition and registration will be on the first night of class. The classes will cover such topics as boat handling, navigation, marlinspike seamanship and piloting. Call Ralph Merrill at 454-4928

Shine receives unexpected thanks

Fred Shine, commander of the Wilmington Disabled American Veterans, recently received some unexpected thanks for a project he completed last year.

Shine, a Vietnam veteran, undertook the job of setting memorials for each of four Wilmington men who lost their lives in the Vietnam war. The fourth monument, honoring John Rich, was dedicated in May, 1985. Like the other three Vietnam memorials, it is of native Wilmington granite with a bronze plaque and a piece of black granite cut from the national Vietnam Memorial in Washington, D.C.

Last week Shine received a plaque thanking him for creating the memorial. The plaque was presented by Bill Pierce, a friend of John Rich.

Wilmington police news

Fifty citations were handed out by the selective enforcement team of the Wilmington Police Department last Thursday evening. The police deployed through Wilmington looking for motor vehicle violators, and checking through most of the hangout areas.

Ten out-of-town youths were arrested in two separate incidents at the Wilmington Plaza. This was after observation by the officers of youths trying to obtain liquor illegally. Among those arested were Robert Bursey, 19, of Dracut; and four youths from Lowell, John Plant, 20; Lynette Pulsifar, 19; Kenneth Joyner, 17 and William Lobas, 18. All were charged with underage possession of alcohol.

During the investigation an altered automobile license was disscovered. It currently is under investigation by Inspector McKenna, who seeks to find where and how the altered license was produced.

Wilmington senior topics

COA meets Monday

The September Council on Aging meeting will be held in the Buzzell Senior Center Monday, Sept. 8. The Council on Aging board members at the meetings bring to the seniors topics to be discussed and voted on.

It is important for all of us to put our input into a motion, which will be accepted or rejected by the Council, especially when it effects the directions the council and seniors will be headed in the year 1987. The council members are appointed by the board of selectmen to speak for the seniors by their vote on motions before them. They cannot know your wishes unless you make them known to them. If you have a question which you would like answered it should be brought to the monthly Council on Aging meeting.

Back to the Future

The movie this week will be "Back to the Future" with Michael Fox. This is a very funny movie and we are sure if you have not seen it you will like it very much and if you have seen it you will enjoy seeing it again. We hope to see you at the free movie, Thursday 1 p.m.

Whist parties

The whist parties this month will be September 15 and 29. Prizes for these parties are made available through the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs. Other prizes are purchased by the whist party committee.

Dance and painting classes

We are still waiting for more seniors to sign up for the dance and painting classes. To learn the latest dances and the proper way to dance them under the instruction of a professional dance teacher would cost $40 to $50 for 10 classes. For a mere stipend at the Center you can learn to dance like a professional all the latest ballroom and line dances.

Painting is another expensive activity if you took the lessons outside the Center. A professional painting teacher receives even more for his instruction. We will need a few more pupils in each class before we start the classes. If you are a new senior and want to meet new friends these classes are excellent ways to do it.

Rep from Waddell and Reed

Mr. Steege from Waddell and Reed will be at the Senior Center Tuesday, September 9 at 2 p.m. He will answer any questions which may be troubling you about the new tax law and how it will effect the senior citizens.

Over night trips

Seniors interested in over-night trips can pick up brochures at the Center. The council on Aging does not book any over-night trips. Two of our seniors have been allowed to put literature for trips on the counter at the Center. These ladies are Frances Calandrello, 658-8805 and Mae Cannizaro, 658-9862. They can be reached at their homes.

Stoneham: Shoes, shoes, shoes

Editor's Note: This is the 2nd in a series of local town and city histories scheduled to appear at regular intervals in Middlesex East.

By JIM ROUILLARD

From Turkey Swamp to the marshes that feed Doleful Pond, the town of Stoneham has consistently proved hard to define as an historical entity.

So when the local historical commission sought, in recent years, a theme which seemed best to define the town's historical significance, they settled upon one chief aspect:

Shoes, shoes and more shoes.

Remote and difficult to reach, by foot, horse or wagon, in the first century and a half of its settlement, as it is by public transportation today, the small, sleepy agricultural community first began to grow from a very sparse and scattered population, with the creation of the Medford-Andover Turnpike in 1806.

The first story in this series explored the town's development from colonial start to separation from Charlestown, and the beginning of its own identity.

Primary source for that section of the story was a useful, but limited, 19th-century history of the town by native son William Stevens, imbued with high enthusiasm, love of his community, and scant professional historical credentials.

Like many 19th-century local histories, Stevens' "History of Stoneham," is devoted to quaint or condescending view of his forebears, pride in contemporary community accomplishment and wealth, and totally uninspired biographies of the town's eminent Victorians.

It is to a more recent work, "Stoneham, Massachusetts: A Shoe Town," (1981), written by Carole Zellie and Martha Coons, that the researcher must turn for a less lurid and self-congratulatory, more accomplished history of the town, which was not always or solely a shoe center:

"By 1673 there was a large trade in cedar posts, shingles and clapboards in the vicinity of Stoneham...(but up to the time of the American Revolution, when there were approximately 75 dwelling houses, Stoneham could be best characterized as a thinly settled, poor community," and it was not until 1806, that the transformation of Stoneham was triggered, from farming village to a "nucleated town" by construction of the Medford-Andover Turnpike.

Farmland near this major toll road was sub-divided for homes for non-agricultural families: shopkeepers, shoemakers, carpenters and other craftsmen.

Though the transformation was slow, by the 1820s and 1830s, Zellie wrote, "farming, the manufacturing of shoes in small shops, and the tanning and currying of leather continued to provide support for the majority of residents, (and) the late 1830s saw the creation of the central shops which formed the nucleus of large shoe factories and tanneries two decades later...

"Although Stoneham's first 'factories' were very modest in scale, by 1837, 380,000 pairs of shoes were manufactured (by) central shops and individual artisans, and Stoneham was one of 24 Middlesex County towns whose chief industry was the making of shoes."

In 1837 Stoneham's output was the largest in the county — with most adults employed in some phase of leather or shoe

MARY MARCHANT, STONEHAM HISTORIAN, leans on shoe case which contains an earlier Stoneham historian's custom-made boots. The boots had been made for Silas Dean – but they pinched and were returned to the cobbler, Peter Doucette, for repair. Unhappily, Mrs. Marchant reported, Dean died before retrieving his boots, which remain in gleaming condition for posterity.

PART ONE

I first met Dudley a year and a half ago, I was introduced to him at a party by a friend. His name isn't Dudley really. It's Chris, and he comes from the UK. I nicknamed him Dudley because he reminded me so much of Dudley Moore, the British actor. The Dudley I know has the same physical attributes, including the same height and build and thick crop of brushed-back wavy dark hair, and speaks with the same polished, fluent English accent. In fact, if you were to meet up with the Dudley I know, you'd most likely mistake him for the real Dudley Moore. That's how much they resemble each other.

Dud, as I grew to call him, and I became terrific buddies. Even though he worked in the computer business (he was the overseas sales director for a well-known local computer company), which I admittedly know very little about, we shared a great deal of outside interests. Sports, for instance. I'll never forget how thrilled Dud was the first time he saw the Celtics live at Boston Garden. We went to see them play the Atlanta Hawks at the beginning of last season. You'd have thought you were observing a child devouring an ice cream cone for the first time in his life!

Then there is his interest in the arts. He particularly enjoyed talking about literature — English, of course, although he was very aware of the works of such great American writers as Hemingway, Fitzgerald and Melville — and the theatre. I've got to admit something else, friends: I've got a formal education in classical theatre — everything from Shakespeare to Chekov to Moliere — but the knowledge this man possessed had even me in awe. He was able to recite Shakespearean sonnets over lunch at the Escadrille with the glibness of a housewife going over her grocery shopping list. He was truly amazing.

Dudley became enamored with the United States very quickly. His visits here became more frequent. It seemed like every other week that he was on the horn to me to meet him for a cocktail. "You're back already?" I'd exclaim, and he'd retort with a zealous "You bet your britches!" And I'd drop whatever I was doing and rush out to meet him for another round of satisfying discourse and cheer. Our meetings were an educational experience unto themselves. Which is why I never missed the chance to share time with this lively chap. He was the front page of the New York Times, "60 Minutes" and Bill Buckley, all rolled up in one neat British bundle.

Nearly a year passed. When Dud wasn't here in the States, which by the way he began to refer to as his "real home," he was constantly either cropping a post card in the mail ("How are you these days? I have not been in the USA for three weeks and I'm getting withdrawal symptoms!" "Haven't you won the Pulitzer Prize yet? Good to see you last time around — I'll be back in July, so maybe we can get together for a social drink or two.") or phoning me to say how much he missed all his friends in America.

And did he make friends! He stayed at the Marriott, in Burlington, and nearly every employee in the hotel grew to know Dudley as a member of their family. It got so bad that a handful of them began to invite him back to their homes for homecooked meals and a night away from the hotel scene. Hotels can become lonely places for many who travel frequently. But for Dudley, staying at the Marriott became an extension of his own homelife back in the UK. And just as home can be the site of turmoil, so did his home away from the UK become the setting for what was to be the first of several disturbing events in his life.

What he least expected to happen to him in America happened: he met a young woman at the hotel one night, and they became close friends. Soon the friendship crossed over to love. Dudley had made his first big mistake: he found it nearly impossible to leave the States to return to the UK. With close friends, it is possible to leave for frequent gaps of time. As much as you miss them, you know in your heart they will be there whenever you return.

With a lover it isn't always the case. You say you're going to be there, waiting patiently for his return. You say you can survive a long distance — in this case, overseas — relationship, but it is never as easy as you think. The heart longs for him to be with you and then something strange happens: no matter how much you care, you begin to move on with your life, meeting new people and developing new friendships. Sometimes those friendships become something greater. Something called new love.

This is exactly what happened to Dudley. The woman here in the States whom he fell so desperately in love with grew tired of trying to cope with an overseas love affair, and eventually fell in love with another man, a man who was going to be around all the time. This devastated Dudley. I'll never forget the night he called and asked me to meet him. I could tell by the sound of his voice that it was urgent. So I went immediately. As usual, we met at one of his favorite watering holes. He sat at the bar with the look of dispair written all over his face. Then he told me the bad news. I tried to comfort him, but no matter what I said to him at that moment, there was no way he was going to feel good about what had happened. He was in love with a woman who lived thousands of miles from him, and I could tell by the words he spoke that night that the trail left behind by his broken heart was going to stretch at least that far and maybe further.

Somehow Dudley managed to survive that miserable ordeal with a woman whom he so badly wanted to settle down in America with. But it was only the first battle he had to face. The second one hit him just a few months later. The computer company he worked for announced that it was going to lay off fifteen hundred employees. Even though he wasn't actually in danger of losing his position with the company, the added pressures that resulted from the crunch the company was facing created a working atmosphere in which he could not survive. So he finally resigned.

The hardest thing for Dudley to deal with at this time was the financial difficulties in which he was left. The company refused to sever their relationship in an amicable manner, and Dudley was left with thousands of dollars in expenses to pay out of his own pocket. He was also left without an adequate severance pay, which made the picture all the bleaker for him. He returned to England not knowing if he would ever return to the States again. This was the most difficult thing for him to face, so difficult that he left without making much fuss over the departure, hoping to leave while incurring as little pain as possible. I don't think it worked, however, judging by the pain all of us, his friends, were left behind to experience.

A few more months went by. I'd received a couple of post cards from Dudley, but their frequency seemed to trail off after a while. There were no phone calls. I began to sense that he was perhaps attempting to begin a new life for himself back home. Then one day, out of the blue, I received a phone call from him. I assumed he was calling from the UK. "No, you silly bolke, I'm calling from right down the street! How about some lunch?" I dropped my pen and pad, and was off.

Dudley and I shared a wonderful lunchtime together. He also had some good news. "I've found another job," he told me. "I've accepted a sales directorship of a Norwegian company." It meant he wouldn't be back to the States as frequently as he would have liked, but at least he would be able to return from time to time. This made him happy, and I knew all his friends here would be pleased to hear the news. It also meant he'd be able to clear up his financial woes, something he seldom mentioned, but I knew bothered him deeply.

Dudley returned to the States again shortly after that. This time he was here to stay for a two week vacation. It was part of the agreement he had with the Norwegian company, and it was evident that it was badly needed. By this time Dud had pretty much gotten over the woman he'd fallen in love with months earlier. He frequently joked about the brief affair, adding he'd be more careful the next time, if there ever was going to be a next time.

Well, sure enough, there was a next time. While on his vacation he met another young lady and he began to see her frequently. So frequently, in fact, that I hardly saw Dudley throughout his stay. Just before his return home he stopped by to see me. "I've some more good news for you," he said. "I think I'm in love."

I reminded him of his pledge to himself, to which he replied, "I know what you're saying, but I know this time it's different. Cynthia is a different lady than you-know-who."

He hated to refer to the first one by her name. He was a hopeless romantic, and there was no way I could keep him from falling head over heels again, so I simply wished them both good luck.

"How are you planning to handle this relationship?" I asked. "After all, it was the distance that killed the first one. You know you are going to have to face the same problem this time around."

He agreed, adding, 'I'm not going to let it destroy this relationship. Cynthia and I are going to see more of each other. I'll bring her over there, if I have to."

Time would tell. I didn't want to reveal any pessimism I might have felt, so I left the conversation at the point. He promised he'd call or write to let me know when he would be coming back.

Somehow he managed to get back to the States within a few weeks. This time it was on business, but of course he made time for his friends and new love, Cynthia. After meeting her I agreed with Dudley that he had met a wonderful young woman. The key word was young. Even though she seemed to possess a lot of mature qualities, and she certainly appeared to care for Dudley more than his first girl friend, there was a minor dilemma in the relationship: she had to be at least twenty-five years younger than he! At one point I cornered Dudley and asked him if he knew what he was getting into.

Part two next week.

Solo-Pak marks 38 years of service

Solo-Pak Hearing Aid Center, 34 Gould Street, Reading, is celebrating their 38th year of hearing aid repairs and services to the hearing impaired.

Solo-Pak has found that many people wearing hearing aids may have experienced a change in their hearing since their fitting and are not aware that their hearing aid, in fact, is not working properly. Just because you turn the hearing aid on and it makes a noise does not mean it is working properly. For example, there are people wearing hearing aids that find themselves using more batteries than when they first got their aids or they think their hearing has gotten worse because they have to make the hearing aid louder and their hearing aid is whistling or is not as clear as it used to be.

To celebrate their 38th Anniversary, Solo-Pak and their certified repair technicians have designated an open house clinic whereby hearing aids will be put through a battery of electronic tests to make sure people are getting the best from their hearing aids. Hearing aids will not be sold during this open house. This is strictly a repair clinic.

In 1948, Solo-Pak, through its founders, established a central location of the highest quality and professional ethics for the hearing impaired. Feel free to contact them for more information about their 38th Anniversary Celebration. Call Solo-Pak in Reading — the repair clinic will be held from 9 a.m. until 4:30 p.m., September 8 through 12.

STONEHAM'S HISTORY IS NOT ONLY SHOES, members of its Historical Society stress. Society headquarters include many fascinating displays of town history, including turn-of-century babies' outfits and grandmother's wardrobes as well.

Shoes, shoes, shoes

manufacture.

"Ten-footers," small, independently owned shoe shops, dotted Stoneham's landscape until the mid-19th century, and produced primarily women's shoes, though the occasional man's pair could be placed by special order, according to Mary Marchant, historian of the Stoneham Historical Society.

A restored ten-footer stands today behind the Stoneham Historical Society headquarters on William Street. Scheduled for demolition, the building was saved, on one day's notice, thanks to the sharp eye and energies of Mrs. Marchant's mother, the late Helen Baldwin Kinsley.

But the day of the ten-footers was approaching its end as the century reached midpoint and the end of another institution, with Stoneham remaining apparently conservative on the larger issue that had already begun to shake the nation:

"In 1837," Zellie writes, "it was voted not to allow anti-slavery lectures and discussions in the meeting house... At least nine Stoneham residents in the 18th and 19th centuries were slave-holders, and the names of slaves appear in various church and town histories."

It was not slavery, however, but new roads and businesses built in the 1830s and 1840s, which "created the framework for the profound physical change which occurrd in Stoneham in the decade of the 1850s. A large population of shoe workers and manufacturers and a diversifying economy helped to create a small manufacturing center which barely resembled the town of twenty years earlier," Zellie wrote.

Yet a charcoal sketch of Main Street, drawn by a Stoneham resident circa 1860, conveys the charm of what seems a much earlier period village, with cattle and canines a few hundred yards from the front of the Congregational Church, women in great-skirted dresses, and the Boston to Stoneham stagecoach heading down Church Street.

But the town's competitive role in the region's shoe manufacturing market had already been established, in the 1850s, with new and larger factories, using horse and steam power and modern machinery — and the Irish immigrants who, according to Zellie, "would contribute importantly to the local labor force for the next half-century."

Along with the Irish labor came the wealth which they helped create, to provide the town's new class of manufacturers and merchants with the wherewithal to build fine — some almost palatial — homes in the styles popular in Boston.

Manufacturing in Stoneham was further stimulated by the Civil War, and arrival of direct railroad service, according to Zellie, and the town grew and prospered until the panics of the early 1870s.

The Town's wealth in this period was reflected in the second empire style of architecture, which "produced the grandest mansions as well as some of the most picturesque cottages," according to Zellie,"... It was on the Second Empire houses of Stoneham that the richest materials and finishes were lavished. Roofs were covered in polychrome slate, and etched glass was set into slender, round-arched mouldings."

Though residential construction in the Boston area was greatly affected by the Panic of 1873, according to Zellie, additional blocks of workers houses were built in the northeast and southeast sections of Stoneham, and "Although local traditions have made issue of the 'Ability Hill' and 'Nobility Hill' notions of residential segregation, Stoneham's people of both wealth and hourly wage lived in close quarters."

An intriguing footnote to Stoneham's history — which really deserves a story all its own — is the vanished village of Haywardville, situated east of Spot Pond and bounded by present-day Woodland Road, Pond Street, the Jerry Jingle Highway and Ravine Road.

The center of several mills, and a brass foundry, producing snuff, spice and chocolate, satinets (fabrics) and most importantly, rubber, the region was, finally, the site of Nathaniel Hayward's Haywardville Mills, employing 30 men and eight women in 1860, and producing 14,000 rubber boots, 50,200 pairs of rubber shoes, 672 dozen rubber pails and buckets, 64 chamber pots and 500 dozen spittoons.

The industry flourished until 1870, according to Zellie, when Spot Pond was converted to a reservoir for the towns of Malden, Melrose and Medford:

"The water of the pond was diverted to the towns, and the mills fell silent. After 10 years of lawsuits, claims were settled, but Haywardville was gone."

Stoneham's industry as a whole, Zellie resumes, recovering somewhat from the Panic of 1873, "showed diversification in the early 1880s, primarily through the E.L. Patch Company which produced chemical and pharmaceutical preparations. Other non-leather industries included pencil sharpeners, carriages, saws, and tennis and baseballs."

With the arrival of the steetcar lines connecting Stoneham to Arlington and Boston, at the turn of the century, portions of Stoneham began to see a new kind of resident: the commuter.

The town's history since 1900 is pretty much standard suburban. But the author includes a significant — and foreboding — postscript on the changing patterns of land use since 1945:

"One of the most profound physical changes in Stoneham after World War II was the transformation of Main Street north of Elm Street from a tree-lined mixture of residential, commercial and industrial buildings to a commercial 'strip'...

"Most of the Main Street mansions built by early industrialists are gone...(and) new housing built since 1950 in the outlying areas of Stoneham has put pressure on the ancient houses of the first settlement.

"Many 18th century houses built by the first generation of residents were torn down for the construction of housing developments... Fragile features of the natural landscape such as wetlands have not fared well, as marshes and swamps were filled for road building and housing projects."

And the activity of jackhammer and wrecker's ball continues. "Protection" of historic sites or wetlands, in some commenters' view, appears to mean — at best — official indifference.

Residents voices are low, sad, and resigned, as they discuss the most recent debacle which historians and preservationists deplore in Stoneham: the unexpected loss of the handsome William Biley Lang House, constructed about 1848, of locally-quarried granite — demolished this summer make way for an office building for New England Memorial Hospital.

Comments Susan Doscher of the Stoneham Hstorical Commission, who said she learned of the building's demolition as she was preparing for a scheduled hearing with the hospital's adminstrators and town officials to discuss the issue:

"To me, Stoneham was never a rich town with a lot of beautiful buildings to come down, as other towns have. I think it's all the sadder to see us losing the few fine buildings we still have left."

But such, residents argue with increasing dismay, is the more recent history — of progress at least — in the town which once was Charlestown End.

Retired Men's Club

Despite heavy rain, 231 retired men of the Retired Men's Club of Wakefield braved the elements on August 28 to hear Charles R. Collins, Jr., of Waddell and Reed, a Woburn-based investment company. The seminar was entitled "Financial Planning for Older Americans," and provided valuable information to those persons who heard his interesting, illustrated lecture.

The following new members were welcomed: William Brownlow and Leo J. Monty of Reading, and William A. Hallam of Wakefield. Visitors included George D. Eastman and Jack T. Turner of Reading and John Mooradian of Wakefield.

Twenty-five birthdays were observed and a moment of silence was observed in memory of John Northcutt (1908-1986) and William McGinley (1908-1986), and for Frank Manning, a leading senior citizen advocate of Massachusetts. Door prizes were won by James Hurton and Charles Strauss.

The band reported that it will be playing October 10 at the Senior Citizens Center in Stoneham. The Camera Club will have its first meeting of the new season on September 16 at 9:30 at the church.

The Travel Club will have a meeting September 18 at 9 a.m. At that time they would like to receive the final payments of those who have signed for the Bermuda trip in November.

On Friday, September 26, the club will sponsor a day trip to the Deerfield Fair and signups are being taken. Spouses and guests are invited. Henry Murphy, chairman of the travel group proudly announced that a second bus has been obtained for the Radio City Music Hall Christmas trip on December 9 and 10, and all persons who signed up can be accommodated. Eighty-four persons will be going.

The new season for the men's club will begin September 10 when the tradition will be honored of having as the speaker Reverend Richard Weisenbach, pastor of the First Parish Congregational Church in Wakefield.

Besides the meetings on the second and fourth Wednesdays of each month, the club has five special interest groups that meet on a regular basis during the year and usually attract 40 or 50 persons at their meetings. These groups include the band, bowling, camera, travel and stamp collecting clubs.

The regular bi-monthly meetings are held at the First Parish Congregational Church in Wakefield at 9:30 a.m. (coffee and donuts at 9 a.m.) and all retired men are urged to attend. There are no dues; no sponsor or invitation is needed. Just come to the church and the hospitality committee will do the rest.

If you are a retired man in Reading, Melrose, Wakefield, Stoneham, Middleton, North Reading, Lynnfield, Woburn, Lynn, Saugus, Wilmington or any other towns in commuting distance of Wakefield, join the other retired men from your community and the area and add a new dimension to your retirement.

See you on September 10 at 9 a.m.!

Woodchips

By ANTHONY MANCONI

A visitor to North Reading, went to church last Sunday. He walked right by the crowded back of the church and sat down in a pew in the almost empty front. After the services the people rushed out like someone pulled the fire alarm box. All except the gentleman who stay seated. The reverend approached him and said "I noticed you sitting, "alone" down front, do you want to see me now to thank me for my sermon? " No reverend, I'm a bus driver and I want to ask you how you get so many people to "find" seats in the "back" of the church? "

Walter Woods, Bob Coleman and Frank Hogan look like the "Dodge Boys," desperadoes of the Frontier days.

Bob and Carol Young of Tewksbury have been fans of Woodchips since its very first column.

Have you ever heard of "Architects" with "Fallen Arches? "; TV repairmen with "Rabbit Ears? "; Telephone operators who have gone "Ding-a-Ling? "

Well folks, Gayle McEarchern, program director for the Jess Cain Show has just given me a "Dear Woodchips" letter. She told me that she fell in love with Graham Chase of the Merchant Marine and will marry him soon. Gayle lives in Woburn and is one of the sweetest young ladies I've ever known. I promise that I'll write a poem about her. I'd marry you Gayle but my wife won't let me! I hope Jess is the "best man" and Johnny "Pudge" Flynn, the engineer is the "ring bearer."

Attention Fred Neilson of the Wilmington Town Crier. I met Rick Hansen last week as he traveled on Rt. I in Lynnfield. Christine Griffin, like Rick, is a wheel chair racer. She told me that Rick was heading for Maine, then Canada and home to British Columbia, finishing his "Around the World Tour" for charity. The business school professor wrote the 3 D's of success in business on the blackboard, then covered them before class. He later asked the students to write down on paper what their 3 D's would be? He than asked Frank Mazzoni to read aloud his answers as he uncovered those on the board which were "drive," "desire," and "determination." Frank's were "delegate," "delay," and "deny! "

Progress? "Who said so? " Every year it takes "less" time to "fly" across the Atlantic and "more" time to drive home from the airport! "

John Cosentino is a new fan of Woodchips from Mohawk, Ontario Canada. John is a college student who vacationed in the U.S. with relatives. He read a copy of this column and will be receiving Woodchips mailed to him by his cousin Josie Pistone, who looks like Connie Frances did in her younger days.

A vegetable garden is a thing of beauty and a "job" forever. Short visits like short sermons make long friends. The object of a salesperson is not to make sales, but to make customers.

Yogi Berra protested a called strike by throwing his bat high up in the air. "Yogi," said the umpire, "if that bat hits the ground you're out of the game." The great Yankee catcher caught the bat then hit a homerun.

Teams from 295 New England companies ran in a recent 3.5 mile road race in Boston. Four employees of Compugraphic in North Reading participated. They were Jack Kelly, Mark Casey, Brian Wolfenden and Rich Christensen. Because of my magnetic personality I was chosen to represent the electric company in the 100 meter run. I tried to take a "short circuit" route but one of the officials "blew a fuse," shouting "watts" the matter with you "wire" you running that way? " "Hey I said, I got lost in the rotary. Anyway the race is not always to the swift, but to those who keep on running.

Congratulations, Barbara Bennett of Stoneham, a recent graduate of Boston Bouve College with a B.S. in education. Barbara you will make a wonderful teacher because you have a lot of "class."

You can bet that most gardeners who have "green thumbs" invariably also have "brown knees."

Good luck on your new Wakefield travel agency, Angela Ciccia.

My neighbor (who is in her eighties) asked a travel agent last spring, "can I get to Niagra Falls by Buffalo? " The agent smiled and said "Ma'am at your age you would be better off going by "bus."

I drove to New Hampshire with my wife Kathy last week and it was a 75 mile argument all the way up. When I noticed a "mule" grazing in a field I asked "one of your relatives? " Kathy smiled and said, "yes dear, by "marriage."

I visited the Stone Zoo and was surprised to see some of the animals playing poker. I asked one animal that was watching why it wasn't playing. Can't you see why? I'm a "Cheetah! " That's one for your Rotarian bulletin, Jim Curley and Harry Ranhand.

To my senior citizen friend, you have seen, I am sure, boxcars of a freight train on a siding or in a remote section of a railroad yard. They look ignored, forgotten or abandoned. Some people sometimes feel "shunted," aside from the main stream of life by their families, relatives and friends. Most of these people are not necessarily old, they are perhaps a little slow for the "fast lane" of the jet set. I met Meyer Wiseman last week who is over 80. He was buying 10 pounds of nails at Fels Hardware in Winchester. "Meyer," I said, "you are still going strong, God bless you." He looked at me, smiled and said, "why not Woodchipper, I haven't time to get "old." "Besides, he continued, "I read your column every week." So help me folks, those were his words, gratefully received by me because Woodchips is dedicated to people who "refuse" to be "shunted" aside. So buy nails, yarn or seeds to help "build" a better world.

"Miss Smith," said the company president, "I have an important message for all the employees. Please connect me with the "coffee machine" area. I'll bet he had plenty of "grounds" to make that statement.

No one ever climbed to the "top" of a mountain by "looking" at it.

The only time I get to open my mouth at my house is when I "yawn."

Bankers had the reputation of being "stoic, cold and heartless." Not in this day and age, brother. Tommy Hill introduced me to a beautiful young lady with the bluest eyes I ever did see. Her name is Kathleen Fitzgerald, a bank loan manager. I didn't get the loan, but I know she is a wonderful, friendly person.

Shanghai Surprise

Short Takes

Shanghai Surprise Starring Madonna, Sean Penn, Paul Freeman. Directed by Jim Goddard. Produced by John Kohn. Screenplay by Kohn and Robert Bentley. Rated PG-13 (profanity, violence, simulated sex).

She's wooden and he's lifeless. So much for the electric husband and wife team of Madonna and Sean Penn. Their first film together could prove to be their last, as this take-off on a Thirties action flick will have you wishing for the real thing.

It is not the budget, as the production values were high. And the plot, about a missionary searching for a lost cache of opium which could be made into morphine for wounded soldiers, has enough twists and turns to keep you intent. But Penn is woefully miscast as a stout-hearted adventurer. He's too young, soft-boiled instead of hard and has none of the edge that made him so convincing in The Falcon and the Snowman.

Madonna, who's idea of acting is to flutter her eyelashes, is coy and annoying. She never steps away from her real-life image, only ineffectually tries to mask it. She has none of the charisma of the woman she claims a likeness to, Marilyn Monroe, or the vivaciousness so apparent in her music videos.

There is a stereotypical Indian father-figure who carves totem poles with the likeness of his favorite Marx brother included. The violence is nauseatingly excessive and not treated with any respect whatsoever. The camera simply focuses in and sits there as the blood drips. There are lots of head and shoulder shots so that when this cheapie shows up on cable it will look as if it were shot for TV in the first place. And finally, there is no reason for anyone to see this.

Short Takes

Stand By Me is a nostalgic film about the growing pains and rituals of four pre-teen boys that was lovingly directed by Rob Reiner. This sensitive, funny flick about one last adventure before entering junior high is surprisingly based on a Stephen King novella. Rated R. * * * *

Flight of The Navigator spins a magical tale of time travel, space travel and intergalactic friendships. It is also one of the few movies on the market that will leave you feeling happy, but not manipulated. Rated PG. * * * *

The Fly is a gross-out scarefest laced with tragic overtones and may well be the quintessential horror flick of all times. Jeff Goldblum, in his finest performance to date, plays a scientist who manages to get mixed up, literally, with a fly, and the results are not for the faint of heart. Rated R. * * * *

One Crazy Summer is a silly flick set in Nantucket that wastes the talents of Demi Moore and John Cusack. Try as it might, it is not the Animal House of the surf and sand crowd. Rated PG. *

Armed and Dangerous takes the security guard business and does for it what Moving Violations did for driving schools: nothing. John Candy, a funny man, is lost amid the insipid plot and dialogue. Rated PG-13. *

Aliens is the kind of flick that will have you holding onto your popcorn and your date to keep you leaping out of your seat. An action-adventure-thriller, this sequel is more intensely scary than the original, and what plot flaws there are have been smoothed over with special effects and precisely timed shockers. Rated R* * *½

Tea in the Harem may try to present a realistic story of two French teenagers who are trapped by poverty and their own lack of ambition, but in reality is pretentious and sexist. The awards it won in France can't make up for the overall dullness. Not rated. *

About Last Night could be the signature film of love stories for this decade, as it deals with young people afraid of commitment. The language is as raw as the sentiment, but the humor alternates nicely between intelligent and intense. Rated R. * * * *

Bullies Starring Jonathan Crombie and Janet Laine Green. Directed by Paul Lynch. Rated R (extreme, gratuitous violence, profanity).

Bullies is the kind of movie where men are men, women are chattel and a bruise is a good time. It's the kind of movie that the wrestling crowd will naturally gravitate towards, as it welcomes verbal abuse and audience participation. When, for instance, a huge, simple-minded hulk beats up his baby-faced sister, people who enjoy brutal and sadistic acts can cheer along.

Vitriolic? Deservedly so. This nasty import from British Columbia pits a bland, but nice family against a vicious version of the Beverly Hillbillies with predictably vile results. The Bullies, as they are so aptly named, have a lot of money from selling their land to a ski resort. Therefore, they can use their toys, such as a monstrous four-wheel drive jeep, to run senior citizens off the road — all the while drooling with delight.

Bullies manages to set the women's movement hurdling back about 25 years. The few women who are represented are either beaten excessively, raped or clad in wet T-shirts.

MADONNA (Above) stars as Gloria Tatlock, a beautiful and very honorable missionary on a dangerous errand of mercy in "Shanghai Surprise," a romantic adventure-comedy set in China during the turbulent Thirties.

The Annual 1941 Air Show, featuring vintage WWII aircraft, will be held on Sept. 12, 13, and 14, at the National Warplane Museum, Geneseo, New York.

The Air Show will include an open flight line, with warplanes such as the Boeing B-17G Flying Fortress, the Stearman PT-17 bi-plane, the Mitchell B-25, and the only flying Avro Anson in North America on display on the ground. During the Air Show's fly-bys, these warplanes will be joined by other aircraft from the United States and Canada for aerial demonstrations.

A highlight of the 1941 Air Show is the warplane aerobatics, in which the aircraft engage in simulated combat encounters and defensive maneuvers.

If you know of events of interest to all, write, care of this local newspaper and tell COMING ATTRACTIONS all about them. We end with a story from the Brande Handbook of Humor.

The husband and wife were in the midst of a violent quarrel, and hubby was losing his temper.

"Be careful, " he said to his wife, "you'll bring out the beast in me."

"So what!" replied the spouse, "Who's afraid of mice?".

Under Ten Fund set up by golfers

A warm, new concept in golf's amateur-professional relationship has developed between the Single Number Golf Association and the New England Section of the Professional Golf Association.

The amateurs, who all play to handicaps of nine or less, will create an 'Under Ten Fund' for humanitarian use by the New England PGA.

The professionals, in turn, will help promote and compete in tournaments with the Single Number Golf Association.

The alignment was announced this week by Bob Cheyne, executive director of the SNGA, and George Wemyss, executive director of New England PGA.

"One of SNGA's principal goals is to contribute something to the golfing community for the years of enjoyment the game has given us," explained Cheyne.

"The 'Under Ten Fund' will be used to benefit members of the New England PGA who may face medical or other unusual expenses that on occasion can become overwhelming. We envision the 'Under Ten Fund' to be similar to the '100 Club' of Boston that serves police and fire personnel in time of emergency."

"Our fund could be helpful, for example, to a young pro faced with a serious illness and family financial strain. The SNGA will simply be the catalyst to create the fund; its use will be solely at the discretion of the New England PGA governing body."

The initiai fund will be created by SNGA's contributing $5 of each $25 membership fee. It would be augmented by proceeds from tournaments that will feature foursomes of a New England PGA pro and three single-number players from his club.

"Our New England PGA board of directors unanimously approved the SNGA proposal at our recent meeting," said Wemyss. "The 'Under Ten Fund' is a thoughtful, humanitarian idea on their part and our members can contribute by promoting the SNGA within our section.

"The golf tournaments involving New England PGA members with single number players from their clubs also can become an enjoyable, worthwhile part of our schedule."

Wemyss will distribute SNGA brochures and membership applications to his 371 New England PGA members at some 300 golf courses in New England.

"Amateurs who qualify (with authenticated handicaps of nine or less) should check with their own professional, call the New England PGA office in Wakefield, (246-4653) or contact Bob Cheyne in Winchester, (729-4878)," he said.

Cheyne, prominent in Boston's Jimmy Fund and on the board of the Horizons for Youth charitable organization, plans to take his SNGA proposal to other PGA Sections in the U.S.

"We anticipate that each Section could have its own 'Under Ten Fund' which, handled with quiet dignity, could make a significant contribution to golf," he said.

Cheyne is a Stoneham resident and long-time member at Bear Hill Golf Club in Stoneham. He and Ernie Roberts, retired executive sports editor of the Boston Globe, are founders of the Single Number Golf Association.
